

Mo & Jamie,

To protect our clients from misuse of their approvals, I intend on stating the following in the general notes of all future installation and evaluation drawings.

“These drawings are applicable only to the product specified. They may not be used for the assembly and/or installation of any other product nor may they be used for rational and/or local approval of any product not produced by the manufacturer stated on these drawings.”

I met with the Board of Engineers yesterday. The result was that they suggested I place a protection clause on our documents and file a complaint against those engineers improperly using the approvals.

I believe this protection clause is necessary and should be acceptable with the approvals. Please concur this to be acceptable.

Thanks,

Warren
